AMUSEMENTS

GLADYS WALTON AT THE BUTLER TODAY

The glitter and glamor of the circus, which appeals to children of all ages from 6 to 60, is one reason for the more than ordinary interest displayed in the coming of "Pink Tights," which will be shown at the Butler today. Its heroine is little Maggie Darnton, known on the billboards as Mlle. Gabrielle St. Simon, whose specialty is to ascend to the clouds in a balloon and then drop to the earth in a parachute.

Maggie is sick of the life she is leading, the ceaseless travel, the dirt and the grime, and she longs to remain in one of the small towns through which they pass. When the circus reaches Pleasanton a few narrow-minded women of the church rise in their wrath against the ill-fighted performer as pictured on the bills and appeal to the young minister to forbid the exhibition. Maggie, in going up that day, is carried away by a strong wind and drops on the roof of the minister's house, and he hides her in a closet pending the departure of the committee. It is this situation that gives rise to a series of the most appealing incidents, leading to a climax as unusual as it is unexpected.

Added to the program will be a two-reel Mack Sennett comedy, "His Niece Nancy."

Monday, "The Last of the Mohicans."
